FOUR ARMED MEN HI-JACK TRUCK ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Bind and Gag Driver, Then
Steal His Loaded
Truck

PUT DRIVER IN WOODS

No Trace of Truck Found by State Highway
Patrol

LANGHORNE, Nov. 24.—Four armed men hi-jacked a truck loaded with general merchandise on the Lincoln Highway near the state police barracks, bound and gagged the driver, and then dumped him out in the woods after driving away with the truck.

The driver, Clarence Anderson, 33, of Baltimore, freed himself after an hour's struggle, and walked to the state highway patrol barracks near Langhorne, and reported the hold-up.

Anderson said he was enroute to Baltimore with the merchandise from New York, when his truck was forced off the highway by four men in a sedan. The four men at pistol point forced him to lie on the floor of the sedan, while they bound and gagged him.

They then drove off the main highway near Parkland, and left him in the woods. No trace of the truck was immediately found.

MANY GUESTS ATTEND

ANDALUSIA, Nov. 24.—November meeting of Andalusia Parent-Teacher Association was held at the school house, Monday evening, with H. Bowers Peters presiding.

Raymond Hill, chairman of committee appointed to give a report on a duplicating machine, reported to the association. A motion was carried to hold the discussion over until the next meeting.

Mr. Peters, principal, asked for the annual donation, which is used to make costumes and defray expenses for the annual Christmas operetta. A motion was passed that the association give its annual donation.

It was decided to have the next meeting of the Association in January, instead of December.

Charles Wenner, chairman of the entertainment committee, introduced the speaker, C. S. Brinton, United States Department of Agriculture, division of food and drugs. Mr. Brinton had several charts and samples of food and cosmetics, which he explained that some manufacturers of canned goods use skins and inferior grades of vegetables and fruits when canning. The Department of Agriculture has prevented false and fraudulent statements from appearing on the labels of goods and drugs, but it has no control over the advertising through newspapers, radio, billboards, etc. The new food and drug act, which will be presented to Congress in December, is more fully written than the present one, and contains no loopholes, and if it is passed the United States Department of Agriculture will have jurisdiction over such things. Mr. Wenner told the members that if they are in favor of the new food and drug act that they could write to Oliver Frey, Washington, D. C., mentioning bill S. 1944.

There were several guests, members of the Cornwells P. T. A., present, and Mrs. Perkins, president, told the association about the variety entertainment to be presented by the "Gym" Club of the Cornwells P. T. A., in the form of a play in Bensalem township high school auditorium, December 15th.

INTENSIVE LIBRARY WORK IS CARRIED OUT IN ALL CLASSES AT THE JEFFERSON AVE. SCHOOL BUILDING; EACH ROOM HAS ITS BOOK NOOK

Children Thus Appreciate
Good Books; Desire
Created for Reading

MARK BOOK WEEK

Exchange Books; Some of
The Rooms Have A
Filing System

Intensive library work is being carried out at Jefferson avenue public school. Each of the nine rooms, housing the first six grades, has its library corner, with books suitable for the children who study therein.

From the first grade to the sixth, are the pupils being instilled with an appreciation for good books, and the result to date is gratifying. The children, state the teachers, are taking pride in their little libraries, the books are being used both at home and at school; the scholars as a result are learning to read and to express themselves better. Likewise it is a boon to all the subjects there taught, as reference books are thus brought into play in the higher grades.

In the fifth and sixth grades which Principal W. J. Rosser supervises, library activities have been stressed recently in the one activity period each week. "We find that all of the classes here, including 355 pupils, are being helped in various ways through reading. A foundation is being laid for appreciation of the value of books, and the importance of reading as the basic means of securing knowledge is being stressed," states the principal. Book week was observed throughout the school last week, and the work is being continued.

Miss Claire Coles' pupils have been reading portions of books which appeal particularly to young students. Poems are also included. An exchange of books is in operation. The pupils bring good books from home, others donate such, and in reading periods these are used. Posters were made last week, the original ideas of the children furnishing the subject matter for illustrations treating with various books they have read. A collection of pictures, illustrating scenes from popular books such as "Tom Sawyer," "Little Women," and others were hung upon the wall during last week. These projects were carried out in connection with English and reading classes.

In the room of Miss Edith Rutherford there are over 100 books available, but a goodly portion of these are in circulation each day. A filing system has been introduced by the children, by which means "tabs" are kept on all books in this room library. Reference books are included, treating on all subjects which the students of this age contact. The fifth grade whose

THINK MURDER SUSPECT VISITED HERE ON MONDAY

Philadelphia Police and State
Troopers in Search
For Man

MAY HAVE ENDED LIFE

State police are still on the look-out for John Zowcoski, wanted in Willow Grove as a suspect in the torch slaying of Tanka Hetman.

Zowcoski is believed to have been in Bristol Monday visiting with relatives or friends here.

The woman's body was wrapped in a gasoline soaked blanket and burned after her skull had been fractured. Search in the neighborhood of Newtown was instituted Monday night when a man answering Zowcoski's description was reported seen and solicited the use of a telephone at the house of a farmer.

Police were notified of the appearance of the man thought to be the suspect in a woods near Newtown and State troopers were called. The troopers were fired on and a posse searched the vicinity without result.

Some are of the opinion that the man may have taken his life when he thought capture was imminent, or under cover of darkness, fled into New Jersey via Yardley.

FACE RIGID GOVT. CONTROL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—Rigid government control of the liquor industry without actual participation in the business was faced by the nation's distillers and embryo retailers today with submission of a substitute fair practice code for distillers, distributors and retailers.

The proposed liquor control plan is embodied in an administration liquor control code offered as a substitute for the draft recently submitted by the distilling industry.

A sub-committee appointed by President Roosevelt, evolved the substitute code. Ostensibly it is a stock gap between the effective date of repeal and the covenants of Congress when permanent liquor legislation is scheduled for enactment. Government circles however believe the proposed control plan will become the basis for a permanent Federal control system.

PROBE FOX CHARGE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—The charge of William Fox, former movie magnate, that a group of New York bankers "swindled the public" while capturing control of his $300,000,000 movie empire, was investigated today at the Senate banking inquiry. Fox was recalled to resume his dramatic story of a "banking conspiracy" that drove him out of the motion picture industry. He was to be questioned particularly about his charge "there was a lot of swindle" of the public after the bankers had secured his great film holdings in 1930.

Fox charged Albert H. Wiggin, then head of the Chase National Bank; Harold L. Stuart, of Halsey, Stuart & Company; John Otterson, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; and Harley L. Clarke, a Chicago capitalist, headed the banking group.

SHAW ADMIRES HITLER

London, Nov. 24.—George Bernard Shaw admires Adolf Hitler as a "very remarkable, very able man," but believes that the German chancellor is poorly informed on biology and ethnology.

In the annual Fabian lecture last night the noted playwright after praising Hitler as a statesman, attacked his anti-Semitic policy thusly:

"Instead of exterminating the Jews he should have said 'I will tolerate Jews to any extent as long as no Jew marries a Jewess.' That is how he could build up a strong, solid German people."

JOHNSON FORGETS FORD AFFAIR

Atlanta, Nov. 24.—The battle in which Henry Ford locked horns with two-listed General Hugh S. Johnson, today was a "forgotten incident" the NRA administrator said here today.

Johnson made no reference to the automobile manufacturer and their celebrated feud in a speech here last night in which he assailed critics of the recovery program, but at his hotel before departing for Warm Springs with a satchel filled with codes for presidential approval, told International News Service:

"I'm not worrying any longer about Ford. That incident is forgotten. Ford is complying with terms of the code, and that's all we care about."

ARREST THREE MEN FOR GAS STATION HOLD-UP

State Trooper Sauer and Detective Russo Make Arrests
Last Night

PLAN HEARING TODAY

Three men are under arrest and according to the authorities have confessed their participation in the hold-up of a gasoline station in Upper Bucks County and the stealing of an automobile from Quakertown. It is stated the trio planned to rob the American Store at Trumbauersville.

The gas station of Mahlon Straus, Silverdale and Blooming Glen roads, Upper Bucks County, was held up on November 14th. The men entered the place and asked for cigarettes and then poked a gun under the nose of Straus. Straus grabbed the gun, however, and fired at the group as they fled from the store.

The pair jumped into a waiting automobile by a third party and dashed away, while Straus blazed at them.

That same night the automobile of Esther Lerch, Bangor, was stolen from Quakertown. Neither the hold-up nor the theft of the car was reported to Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo or the State Police.

Monday an automobile was found on Three-Mile Run road with five bullet holes in it. The authorities were notified.

State Trooper Sauer, Doylestown, and Detective Russo started an investigation, and late last night established the owner of the car and took into custody Jack Scherbaty, 18, 635 East 11th street, Theodore Kulba, 18, 621 East 9th street, New York City, and Kasmer Ke, 18, Milford Square. The men confessed to the theft of the car and the hold-up and also told the officers they planned the store robbery at Trumbauersville. It is said, The home of Joseph Leonard, Ridgehill Road, was searched and an automatic .32 revolver was found and also a plain .32 pistol.

In the statement given to the officers it was stated that the whole affair had been planned at the Leonard home. The men are in Doylestown jail and will be given a hearing today.

State Police Prepare To Combat Any New Rackets

HARRISBURG, Nov. 24.—(INS)—Anticipating a wave of new "rackets" and the transfer of gangster activities to other fields with repeal of the 18th Amendment, Pennsylvania through its state police department is preparing to meet "fire" with "fire."

Major Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of state police, has established an intelligence unit in his department and is now drafting a "who's who" of criminals in the Keystone state. All information on criminals and their associates is being gathered by the unit for future reference.

Adams believes it inevitable that persons who have thrived on the illicit liquor business for the past 13 years now will turn their attention to other "shady" enterprises.

"They are going to reach the conclusion that there is no more money for them in liquor," he said.

The drift of liquor barons to other fields of endeavor already has begun, troopers have discovered from concrete evidence obtained in various sections of the state, Adams asserted.

Going back over records, he showed that with the advent of prohibition, pickpockets, safebreakers, and others desirous of making "big money with few risks" deserted their "rackets" for the illicit liquor business.

So far as he has been able to determine no "racket" of momentous proportions is in the process of organization, but he foresees the possibility of some. Despite rigid laws designed to eradicate kidnapping the superintendent expects an increase in this type of crime.

THE WASHINGTON PAYROLL

Whatever the NRA, AAA, RFC, CCC and other government-by-abbreviations functions accomplish in the way of improving employment conditions, they cannot be said to have fallen down as job makers.

These recovery or emergency agencies have created 16,666 jobs to date and will continue to augment the Federal payrolls at a time when the nation needs nothing more than jobs and payrolls. Another 16,000 temporary jobs have been created in the cabinet departments, which are doing their part of the recovery work.

Not included in these figures are the CCC enrollments, superintendents, foremen, clerks and others, who come under the forestry departments of the several states although they owe their salaries to Uncle Sam. These jobs run up into the thousands.

The net increase of Federal jobs is, of course, only 3,000, due to the "resignations" which usually follow a change of administrations at Washington, yet the turnover has been tremendous. Releases since March 4 have numbered 145,000 appointments, 148,000. Although some of the 145,000 are included in the 148,000, by virtue of reappointment in other departments, scores of thousands are now getting money where others were getting it eight months ago.

"Jim" Farley, dubbed Prince of Pap by his President, seems to be doing right well by the faithful, the protests of Democratic congressmen to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE LAW OF FRIENDSHIP

Emerson defined friendship by attributing to it the characteristics of Truth and Tenderness. Between friends, each may be sincerely himself, without the protection of sham or affectation often assumed in ordinary intercourse. "My friend," said Emerson, "gives me entertainment without requiring me to stoop or to hiss, or to mask myself." Further, friendship needs tenderness to tide it over rough roads and hard fare, which are bound to come. The end of friendship is for aid and comfort through all the relations and passages of life and death. Without Truth and Tenderness, a friendship cannot survive such experience.

This kind of friendship seems of necessity to be limited to two persons. With the presence of a third, self-consciousness enters in and the fine sincerity of the former relation is lost. It is difficult enough to find two persons whose interests and personalities so complement each other as to make real friendship possible. A third would complicate the situation hopelessly.

Someone will say, what of the clubs and lodges where men grow intimate with each other? Such exist in numbers, it is true; but real friendship as defined by Emerson cannot develop in the midst of a group. The whole of each member's personality could never be grasped by the others. The law of one to one, as Emerson sums it up, is the practice and consummation of friendship.

Litvinoff's "half hour" was exclusive of penalties and time out.

The real truth, in most of those cases, would read thus: "It was a love match. He loved her money and she loved his love."

"KNAVE'S GIRL"
By JOAN CLAYTON
COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Young and lovely Patricia Warren employs the card skill she inherited from her late father to help support her stepmother and step-sisters by playing at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Pat receives fifty cents an hour. She declines the offer of Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, to make her his secretary and partner when, after taking her home, he tries to make love to her. Her nagging stepmother is furious at Pat's refusal. Later, at Mrs. Sycott's home, Patricia meets Clark Tracey, her ideal, only to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Marthe March. Pat is heartbroken. New Year's Eve, Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, insists that Pat accompany him to a dance. They stop at a rival racketeer's place where Bill demands settlement for infringement on his territory. He is shot and Pat flees in terror. Arriving home, Pat is put out by her stepmother who says the police are looking for her. Leda Frayne, a friend, offers Pat a home with her. After searching for work in vain, Pat enters a professional bridge game at the Hotel Beaucarne and wins $35. Jubilant, she returns to Leda. Phil Kennedy, Leda's fiancé, quarrels with Pat for gambling, and objects to her living with Leda. Pat rents a cheap furnished room. Next day, she returns to the hotel for another game. Wally Edge, her partner of the previous day, informs her he has two "lambs," inferring that the latter could be cheated easily. When Pat disappears, he claims she misunderstood.

CHAPTER NINE

"Shall we go in then? The lambs are waiting."
Still the girl hesitated. She sent him a timid, ingenuous smile. She appeared to be searching for words. At length she said impulsively, "I know I'm being silly but if you'd just as soon I'd rather play against someone else."
"Why?"
"I prefer playing against people who play well. It's no fun winning from dubs."
"Well you are a philanthropist," gumbled the man. Again he concealed his annoyance. Something in the girl's expression warned him. He concluded sulkily, "If I hadn't seen you play I'd think you were too big-hearted to be any good."

"I could come back some other time," offered Patricia, ignoring this. "Maybe you'll find someone else then."
"Oh, I'll find someone now."

He did. The moments he selected, a pale, thin man and his sharp-eyed wife, if not expert, were certainly not lambs. At the end of two hours of spirited battle Patricia was delighted to be fifteen dollars ahead. Wally Edge sighed over lost hundreds. But he urged the girl to meet him there the following afternoon. She agreed. She had no doubt of her ability to keep Wally Edge in bounds.

Declining his escort, she left the hot, smoky hotel. In the January twilight Fifth Avenue seemed gratefully cool and quiet. The bridge had tired her, after all. She walked slowly. She thought of Phil and Phil's violent belief that gambling was a sin. With a pang in her heart she remembered Clark Tracey and Marthe March. Those two had gambled but that was social gambling. There was nothing social about sitting in a public hotel striving to win from strangers. Her father had been a professional gambler. Was she bound for the same fate? Had she taken the first steps toward that career of brief joys and lasting sorrows?

Suddenly the money in her pocketbook seemed less desirable. She knew that her opponent of the afternoon was well able to lose but she recalled uncomfortably his glance as he paid his wife's losses and his own.

She said, "I'd like to see Patrolman Mallory."

"But what else can I do?" she said aloud, almost in a tone of despair.

"I wouldn't know, lady," broke in a strange voice at her elbow. Patricia started. She looked into an old man's eyes, an old tired man wearing a sandwich board. With no preamble, entirely without volition, she said, "Maybe you would."

"Maybe," he conceded doubtfully. She guessed that in a moment more he would ask her for money. She meant now to play Fate first. So odd is the human mind that she failed to realize that she was gambling with his answer exactly as she might gamble upon the fall of a coin.

She said abruptly, "I make my living playing cards for money. It's the only thing I can do. Does that make it right?"

"You're young," said the old man, unexpectedly shrewd. "You could go home and let your folks take care of you."

He had played Fate with a vengeance. Patricia suddenly, superstitiously, determined to take his advice. Thrusting one of her precious bills upon the surprised old man she hurried down Fifth Avenue, took the turn that led her home. Teresa, playing in the street, recognized her sister with a scream of joy. The child's arms around her, Patricia, like one in a dream, walked down the basement steps and into the familiar living room. She believed her problem solved until she saw Lillian Warren's face.

Even then she tried. She said to her stepmother, "Well I've come back."

"So I see," said the other acidly. She added, "Don't think for a minute I'm going to let you stay. When you left this house you left it for good and all."

"Oh I know that," Patricia stood up. There seemed nothing else to say. Teresa began to cry. Stopping over to comfort the child, Patricia folded a ten dollar bill in the small of her hand. Straightening she said dully, "May I see Ellen before I leave?"

"Ellen's at the day nursery. They take care of her now till six o'clock."

It wasn't home any more. How quickly Lillian Warren had adjusted herself to the absence of the girl who had used to feed and dress and bathe the baby. Everything was changed. Everything was different. Patricia walked slowly toward the door.

"And if I was you," said the stepmother, "before I left the neighborhood I'd drop in at the Charles Street Police Station."

"The police don't want me any more," Patricia said.

"They may not want to put you under arrest," was the other's enigmatic response. "But just yesterday Mallory on this beat told me he had some important information for you."

Out on the street again Patricia had plenty of room for thought. What important information could the police have for her? It concerned Bill McGee, of course. But how could he harm her now?

Patricia felt a little queer entering the Charles Street police station. She had passed it a thousand times but never once had she been inside. Patricia crossed the bare, uncarpeted floor to the sergeant's desk.

"What can I do for you, Miss?" he inquired, looking up.

She said, "I'd like to see Patrolman Mallory."

The sergeant glanced at the clock, said, "You'll have a wait, I'm afraid. Mallory isn't due till six." Then he added, "Maybe I'll do. What's your trouble?"

"I don't think it's a trouble," the girl replied, flushing slightly. "I'm Patricia Warren."

"Oh, I see." The sergeant's expression changed. He regarded her now with frank curiosity. His voice was imperceptibly brusque, discourteous, when he said, "I guess you'd better talk to Mallory."

Patricia's flush deepened. She held her ground. She wet her lips. "Is—?" she stammered and then resumed, "I'm not wanted for questioning, am I? In the Bill McGee case?"

"Not now," he informed her dryly. "Since Bill seems to believe he shot himself by accident we've lost our interest."

Patricia guessed his thoughts. Feeling ashamed, humiliated, she asked herself to wait for Mallory.

Y. M. A. WINS CONTEST BY NARROW MARGIN

(By T. M. Juno)

Schedule for Monday Night
Y. M. A. vs. Third Ward
St. Ann's vs. Odd Fellows

Bristol basketball fans were treated to two thrilling and exciting games of basketball last night in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall. In the opening match, the Young Men's Association was surprised by the St. Ann's A. A. team, although they managed to eke out a close 25-24 victory. The second fracas brought together the Hibernians and the Hawks, with victory going to the Hibs, 42-37, after an extra five minutes were played.

The Y. M. A. Saints tilt was interesting from the start and the Purple and Gold five amazed the spectators by their spectacular floorwork which completely baffled the 1932 champions. Led by "Buck" Russo, former Rider College star, the much smaller team which before the game started was slated to take a lacing, kept right after the ultimate winners. In the first quarter the Wood street boys missed too many shots near the basket. Time and time again, players were open with clean shots, only to miss them.

The winning field goal was made by "Henny" Morgan, with one minute remaining to be played. Morgan's shot, his only score of the night, was an underhand throw beneath the basket. Tullio made one of his foul shots in two tries later, bringing the score to 25-24, but Ray Pico missed a chance to win the game with 15 seconds left when his shot hit the rim on the inside and bounced out.

But Tullio's shooting kept the Saints in the scoring department of the game. Tullio scored four field goals and six singles for a total of 14 points. Russo was next high with nine. In the second half Russo blanked "Reds" Bailey both from the foul mark and the field.

"Toby" Lawrence was high scorer for the winners, making three field goals and a like number of free shots for nine points. Bauer played a wonderful defensive game.

ROE BROTHERS PLAY A VERY STIFF GAME

It took the Roe brothers, "Eddie" and "Jole," to give the Hibernians a hard-fought victory over the Hawks—42-37 in an extra five-minute game. The Roe boys scored the entire seven points in the extra period.

The fray was a see-saw battle from the second quarter on. At the end of the first quarter, the Birds had amassed a 12-2 lead and completely outplayed the Big Green. The second period saw the Hibs start creeping on to the Hawks' total and with Gige Dougherty leading the attack took a 20-16 lead at half-time.

The lead increased in the third session but the Hawks came from behind in the final quarter and in the last three minutes of playing shaved down the Hibs' 35-26 lead to deadlock the count. Frey scored the tying double-decker with a long shot just as Timekeeper Vic Potts sounded the whistle, bringing the regulation time game to a close.

Two field goals and a foul by "Ed" Roe and a double-decker by Joe brought the victory in the extra period, although Saskowitz did the passing aided by the pivot playing of Dougherty and Donnelly.

Cole and Dorsey were the leaders of the attack of the Black and White team. Dugan was high scorer with 11 points. Each of the Hawk players were credited with two field goals.

On Monday night, the Young Men's Association meets the Third Ward A. C., while the St. Ann's team plays the Hawks. On Friday night, instead of Thursday, the Knights of Columbus meet the Hibernians and the Hawks play the Paterson Parchment Paper Company.
